HARD CIDER THAT'S REFRESHINGLY LIGHT

By MIX Editor (<http://connect.oregonlive.com/user/SpecialMIX/index.html>)

Reed Darmon

By DANIELLE CENTONI

Hard cider is undergoing a renaissance, especially here in the Northwest, thanks to our DIY culture and abundance of apple orchards. One of the newest entries into the local market also happens to be one of our absolute favorites.

Reverend Nat's "Revival" Hard Cider

(<http://reverendnatshardcider.com/>) sports a bold, graphic Dr. Bronner-like label (with erudite, rather than crazy, rants), and within each flip-top bottle is a supremely dry, delicately apple-y, lightly yeasty, barely effervescent cider reminiscent of Spanish sidra. It's neither sweet nor sour, contains about half the alcohol of a glass of wine, and is seriously refreshing, making it our go-to sipper this summer. The good reverend, who produces the cider in his basement, is always working on new flavors. This summer, you can expect to see "Deliverance Ginger," "Hallelujah Apricot" and single-varietal bottlings among his lineup.

Available at Belmont Station (<http://belmont-station.com/>), Pearl Specialty Market (<http://www.pearlspecialty.com/>) and Saraveza (<http://saraveza.com/>), among others. For a list of stores, visit reverendnatshardcider.com (<http://reverendnatshardcider.com/>)
